COMMENTS
(6.5) The Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation's (FDIC) written procedures for supervisory ethics notices are not paper-based. Instead, the procedures are integrated into its information technology infrastructure that employees are required to use to execute their job responsibilities. The procedures include system notices and instructions that prompt the new supervisors to access the supervisory notice. Based on its review of these systematic notices and instructions, OGE determined that FDIC has established written procedures for supervisory ethics notices.

RECOMMENDATION

#	Element	RECOMMENDATION	Compliance Due
1		RECOMMENDATION: Ensure that all confidential filers receive annual ethics training. AGENCY RESPONSE: In 2017, FDIC disseminated ethics information and materials on three separate occasions including the distribution of FDIC Directive 2410.6 Standards of Ethical Conduct for Employees which includes a link to both the Executive Branch-wide Standards of Ethical Conduct as well as the FDIC Supplemental Standards of Ethical Conduct, a six-minute video message from the Chairman discussing ethics in the workplace and maintaining an ethical culture, and a broadcast email reminder about the gift rules around the holidays. The Ethics Unit is currently on target to train all confidential financial disclosure filers as required by 5 CFR 2638.307(a)(1) in 2018 and beyond either through live, classroom training or an interactive web-based training module that will be released in October 2018. The Ethics Unit began offering live training sessions in June 2018 and is utilizing videoconferencing technology to broadcast the training sessions conducted at headquarters to all of the regional offices. Videoconferencing provides the opportunity for attendees in the regional offices to interact directly with the instructors at the headquarters site during the training sessions. Employees in regional and field offices also have opportunities to attend, in their regional and field offices live classroom ethics training sessions and/or connect to those training sessions via web-based meeting software, conducted by Deputy Ethics Counselors. Any employee not able to participate in a live/videoconference/web-based session will complete annual ethics training via an interactive web-based training module. The Ethics Unit is currently working with FDIC's Corporate University to develop several web-based, interactive training modules for future years.
